The contingents swelled Tuesday morning as janitors were joined by members of several other unions, including those representing parimutuel ticket-sellers, tote-board operators and culinary workers.

Berkeley and Albany police directed traffic by the peaceful, high-spirited protesters, and no altercations were reported, although some strikers chided drivers for crossing their lines.

Golden Gate Fields spokesman Norm Hershon said Monday the track was "coping very well" with the strike and planned to open as scheduled.

In a prepared statement, Hershon said the track "apologizes in advance for any inconvenience" patrons might encounter.

He also said the track management was "ready, willing and able to re-

LBANY — A new city ordinance governing hiring, promotions and firing of firemen and police officers won final Monday despite suggestions the document needed further and debate.

Police Chief James Simmons, who had raised objections to parts of the new ordinance at its first reading last week, was present at the council meeting Monday but offered no comments.

However, in a letter to the council, Simmons had urged that final passage of the document be delayed pending further study.

One of the chief's main objections was the fact that the ordinance omits organizational tables for the Fire and Police departments, leaving it up to the council to lay out specifics concerning ranks and structure in another ordinance or resolution.

Simmons' letter also maintained that the associations representing firefighters and police officers, which participated in "meet and confer" sessions over the contents of the new ordinance, remained dissatisfied with the document.

But two other letters to the council from the presidents of the Albany Peace Officers' Association and Albany Fire Fighters' Association said that meetings with city staff to discuss the ordinance had resulted in "substantial agreement" over the final draft.

The police association added, though, that it agreed with Simmons that the ordinance should delineate the ranks in each department.

Before Monday's final approval of the ordinance, Johns argued for further discussion, saying, "It's not a

Albany waterfront: plan two

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — A second developer with an interest in Albany's waterfront said last week it is far too early to envision an exact plan for the piece of land jutting out into San Francisco Bay.

In a presentation to the city's Waterfront Committee, Gerald Barney said drawing up a plan would require a "reconaissance" study taking up to six months to determine exactly what is feasible on the site.

Barney, a harbor and marina specialist who runs a private development and consulting firm in Ojai, suggested an existing waterfront plan prepared for the city and adopted as city policy in 1976 might not be technically or financially practicable.

"I would not want to be locked into this particular plan," he said of the scheme prepared by the planning and engineering firm Environ, which envisions a mix of private and public uses for the waterfront. "Maybe there's a lot better solution if you don't use the same assumptions."

Barney also suggested the city should be skeptical of any developer who sets forth specific plans at this early stage, saying, "There isn't anybody who can give you a detailed proposal that's worth anything at this point."

RUSD pledges no '83 layoffs

By BARBARA ERICKSON

Richmond Unified school board members, eager to reassure gun-shy employees that there will be no layoffs this year, have sealed their promise with a 4-1 vote.

Board member Frank Calton was the only dissenter Feb.2 when the panel voted to send no layoff notices to employees. Calton said the district does not know enough about next year's budget to make such a decision now.

"I hope my pessimism is unwarranted," he said after the vote.

The decision affects about 1,100 non-teaching employees and about 1,600 administrators, teachers, and counselors with teaching certificates.

The board took action after Thomas Anton, assistant superintendent for personnel services, reported that attrition would take care of any necessary staff reductions this year.

In his report, Anton said the district sent layoff notices to 187 teachers in 1980, 86 in 1981, and 60 in 1982. Each year, however, the teachers were rehired because of normal attrition and the restoration of programs.

According to state law, teachers must receive preliminary layoff notices by March 15 and final notices by May 15. Reduction in teaching staff is allowed only because of declining enrollment or program cuts.

Non-teaching employees must receive notice only 30 days before the layoff.

Anton said that the district's enrollment is not declining enough to justify layoffs and even if the schools reduced programs to the extent allowed by law, normal attrition would take care of any need for reduc-

E.C. gives recycling a reprieve

By GORDON RADDUE

L CERRITO — The City Council has overturned a Planning Commission decision that E.C.ology recycling center's side pickup program be moved its headquarters at the east end hmidt Lane by February 1985.

e council Monday night voted uphold its own appeal of the ion imposed by the Planning ission Jan. 5 in granting the two-year extension of its use to operate the recycling pro- t the Schmidt Lane site.

ncil members Howard Abelson and Margaret Collins cast the dissenting votes.

"I think everybody agreed three years ago that the Schmidt Lane site was wrong for what was going on there," Abelson said.

Park Vista resident Bill Miner, who lives in the vicinity of the recycling center, argued for the two-year deadline, stating that noise caused by the center is offensive to the residents of the area, 70 percent of whom he said were senior citizens.

"A two-year limit was what we were promised," said Miner. "We think the current use violates the law and you should close it out."

Council member Richard Spellmann, noting that the proposed West County waste-to-energy regional recycling center may not be opened for another five years, led the council arguments against the deadline for moving the curbside pickup program.

"We need to indicate that it is council policy that we will operate this center and it won't be a political football up for grabs every two years," he said, adding that the permit will reviewed by the Planning Commission every two years.

Collins, in supporting Abelson's position, said:

"I don't think it's fair to make the residents wait out another site."

Council member James Allen responded by saying, "I feel this council has made every effort to accommodate the residents. Recycling is here to stay. The council feels it is a means to keep garbage rates lower and to help improve the environment.

Spellmann said he felt there was "undue pessimism" as to the establishment of the West County waste-to-energy site.

"Plans are moving ahead," he said. "People are working on getting a waste energy plan for West Contra

Search for Boyle's son abandoned

By GORDON RADDUE

The 26-year-old son of prominent Richmond civic leader Lois Boyle and the young man's 21-year-old fiancee apparently have been washed from the rocks near the mouth of the Golden Gate and drowned.

U.S. Coast Guard Petty Officer Randi Ian said Tuesday the search was suspended for James Howard Boyle, a senior at Chico State University, and Stacey L. Lynch of Gridley, who had been living at the Boyles' Richmond home.

Lois Boyle, Recreation Division supervisor for the city of El Cerrito, said her son and Lynch had gone pic-

Another developer looks at waterfront

His presentation to the Waterfront Committee was a marked contrast to one two weeks earlier by Howard Cohen, a Tiburon-based real estate developer and management consulant, and Anthony Wright, his architect partner.

Cohen and Wright had come with specific ideas complete with drawings, albeit preliminary, and had suggested construction on the project might begin as early as next year.

Barney, instead of visual aids, brought lots of advice for the city on how to choose a waterfront developer. He also envisioned a longer time frame from selection of the developer to actual groundbreaking.

He recommended that Albany choose a developer on the basis of his reputation and credentials rather than what he has to show, saying, "The most important thing about a developer is: Who is he?"

Once a developer is selected, the city should grant him a six-month license for "reconnaissance" studies, Barney advised. During this period, the developer would assess technical, environmental, regulatory and economic aspects of the project and come up with a "conceptual plan."

If the city liked this plan, it would give the developer a two-year option to undertake the project, providing time to get necessary permits and put financing in place. The next step would be a long-term lease and the start of construction.

Barney estimated that "reconnaissance" would cost up to $200,000 and planning and creation of working drawings during the option stage $2 million. "I'm looking at a $2.2 million planning cost to get to the point of starting construction," he said. The developer would bear this expense.

Barney said a developer would finance the project in one of two ways, either by borrowing or by bringing in equity investors. "If the city will give the developer the latitude to develop profit centers in the project, he can finance the whole project," he said.

He anticipated that the developer would want just two things from the city: help in issuing industrial development bonds, and possibly the exercise of eminent domain powers to acquire additional land.

In this regard, Barney indicated that he would like to see the proposed project area expanded from city-owned property, now occupied by the Albany Landfill, to adjacent property owned by the Santa Fe Land Improvement Co.

Barney said at one point that he had some concrete ideas for Albany's waterfront "at the back of my mind" but didn't want to tip off the competition.

He suggested that when the city gets to the stage of formally inviting development proposals, it might "liberalize" the Environ plan guidelines to include additional elements such as commercial fishing and lodging.

The city should draft a proposed option and lease, he said, including approximately the level of rent it would set for the land. "The amount of intensity you get is going to be proportionate to the pound of flesh you exact in rent," he noted.

Barney said he would want to see a "quality" development in Albany, adding, "That doesn't mean exclusive; but people don't want to go to a junky, phony place."

Asked what he thought of San Francisco's Pier 39, he said that was not his idea of quality. "It's Disneyland West, it's pure exploitation and, as far as I'm concerned, it's garbage," he said.

Barney described himself as a marina and harbor expert with a decade of experience navigating projects through "the hodgepodge and profusion of political regulation and environmental causes."

As manager of the Ventura Port District, he said, he oversaw the planning of a project which will turn 300 acres of "bare waterfront" into a $200 million complex including a 2,000-slip marina.

He said one part of that project alone, a $20 million fisherman's wharf, took three years to plan and entailed 1,200 meetings with government people.

Barney previously worked as director of the Santa Cruz Port District. He was born in San Francisco, grew up in San Carlos and spent 12 years in the Coast Guard. His wife comes from Albany.

Barney said his firm, the Barney Management Company, is an "umbrella" for a consortium of "the world's experts" in harbor and marina development.

He said that if he were to develop Albany's waterfront, an equal partner in the project would be "a major planning and architectural firm of worldwide reknown."

tions.

Each year, he said, about 30 secondary teachers retire and 40 take leaves of absence, "more than enough to compensate for the need to lay off teachers."

As a result, he said, the administration recommended no layoffs next year.

Dave Platte, field representative for Public Employees Union Local 1, asked the board to vote on the recommendation to give a guarantee, "because you may change your minds."

Ernie Ciarrocchi, executive director of United Teachers of Richmond, said a vote would encour ees, who have suffered t rale.

terribly bad ordinance, but I think it deserves further clarification."

A member of the audience, Dario Meniketti, also urged the council to postpone final consideration, saying the ordinance still contained numerous "bugs."

But council member Robert Nichols said he felt the ordinance "lays out a very fine framework" for the civil service which would be fair to both employees and the community.

And Mayor Ruth Ganong said, "No matter how we try, we will never have the perfect ordinance that will not have to be amended... This is at this time probably about as good as we can do."

After passing the ordinance, the council also adopted a list of recommendations from Administrative Officer William Haden for setting out details of fire and police ranks and job descriptions.

Haden had recommended adding Police Department job descriptions to a 1980 council resolution which established an employee classification plan for other city departments.

He also recommended substituting the title "firefighter" for the outmoded "hoseman" in the Fire Department and eliminating by attrition the position title of "hoseman-alarm maintenance man." nicking at about 1:30 p.m. Saturday at a cliff area in Fort Cronkite in Marin County.

"They'd been to the place several times before," she said. "It had been raining, but when it cleared up they decided to go."

A witness called the National Park Service on Saturday to report that a man and a woman had been swept off a cliff by the pounding surf near Point Bonita, just across the Golden Gate Bridge from San Francisco.

The Coast Guard was called in and a helicopter crew reported seeing a woman floating face down in the water several yards from shore. But before she could be reached the body slipped under the water and disappeared.

The National Park Service continued its search Monday, discovering a car abandoned in the parking lot. In the vehicle was a purse. Other items found on the rocks and in the water led to the identification of the victims.

The Coast Guard called off its sea hunt Monday because of the weather.

According to National Park Service spokesperson Sherwin Smith, the couple had been hiking on the headlands and ventured into a hazardous zone marked off by warning signs, some 20-30 feet above the water line.

She said the waves in the headland are dangerously high and often crash against the rocks.

"It's a popular spot, but it's also very dangerous," said Smith. "There is also a warning sign where the car was parked."

Smith said it was shortly after 4 p.m. when a park ranger was notified of the incident. The ranger contacted the Coast Guard and the Park Service rescue division.

A Coast Guard helicopter and cutter and a Park Service boat were immediately rushed to the scene.

Witnesses standing on the plateau reported seeing Lynch fall into the surf. Boyle reportedly struggled for a considerable length of time to help his fallen companion but was swept off the rocks by a huge wave.

Boyle was a 1974 graduate of Kennedy High School who served three years in the Army before resuming his education at the College of the Sequoias, where he obtained an associate of arts degree.

He transferred to Chico State to pursue studies in mechanical engineering and had one semester remaining to earn his bachelor's degree.

He had come home to work as an industrial fabricator before completing his education at Chico.

He had just taken out a business license and was in the process of putting together a mobile unit for the work.

He was going to take the mobile unit to Chico for his final semester, his mother said.

His fiancee was a graduate of Heald Business College in Chico. She had come to the Bay Area to find work last October and in a matter of weeks was able to get a job as a secretary for a San Francisco engineering firm, Boyle said.

People picketing the Gilman entrance Tuesday said unionized security guards had crossed the lines and gone to work.

But Local 28 of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees, which represents about 250 food service workers at the track, made a strong showing on the picket line.

Unionized electricians employed by American Tote Company and members of Local 280 of the Mutuel Clerks stood to one side, refusing to cross the line. They said management people were doing their jobs at the track.

The issue in the strike is money, although the two sides have different versions of the specifics.

Sal Rosselli, business manager of Local 9, said the union wants a total wage package increase of 16.5 percent over three years, while the last management offer was 9 percent.

Richard Hughes, chief negotiator for the track, said last week that the union's demand amounts to 30 percent over three years. But Rosselli said that figure applies to wages alone, and that when benefits are included it averages out to much less.

While spokesmen for the track management contended that the janitors were asking for more than any of the other unions whose contracts have been settled, the union maintained that in fact it was asking for less.

Rosselli said Tuesday no further bargaining sessions had been scheduled, but some union members expressed hope that talks might resume when three key manag pals who are out of tow in the week.

In a related matter, the council voted 4-1, only Abelson dissenting, to authorize bids for recycling center equipment under a $75,000 grant obtained through the State Solid Waste Management Board.

The equipment to be purchased includes a sweeper attachment that Community Services Director Joel Witherell said will eliminate much of the noise at the center.

The council unanimously adopted a law establishing a High Hazardous Fire Area east of Arlington Avenue within the city limits. A citation system is being prepared by the City Attorney's office to enforce the law's fire prevention requirements.

Berger & Ben Franklin: successful book marketing

Her business expands even in a recession

By PATRICK KEEFFE

ALBANY — Audrey Berger had been teaching high school English for 12 years and was burning out. One summer day she asked her friend Marilyn Capitelli if d like to open a children's book store.

They reserched other book stores, talked extensively h friends who were booksellers in San Francisco, and ided instead to open a general book store. The result s Ben Franklin Books at 1361 Solano Ave., which they ned in 1974.

Berger, a local resident for more than 20 years, bought her partner and has been running the business successy by herself since 1976. So successfully, in fact, that in depths of the recession, she opened another Ben nklin Books at 1600 Shattuck Ave. in the North Berey Centre.

Berger said she attributes her success to knowing what particular community needs and wants in the way of oks, to careful purchasing and display, to strong men's and children's sections, and to giving personal vice to her customers — "independent bookselling is a gional business," she said.

She said another secret to success is hard work. Along with that, though, has come a bit of luck.

"When the Co-op book store closed a few years ago, were the only book store between Albany and the UCkeley campus," Berger said. "Our business jumped 40 cent right away."

Then another book store opened on upper Solano, but ger's business has remained solid and steady.

"The market here in Albany is younger buyers, people starting in the professions, families with young children," she said. "In north Berkeley, it's a different market.

"Berkeley people are more critical, more competitive. sell a lot of professional books in the new store. Computer books, for instance, are big sellers there."

Audrey Berger at the original Ben Franklin Books in Albany

She said people ask her all the time about how to run a profitable book store.

"I always tell them the ideal is an area where people read a lot, an academic community, good foot traffic, and people who will spend money on books, people for whom books are a necessity for their life and business.

"It dawned on me a few years ago, after I had told someone that, that I was describing the neighborhood around the North Berkeley Centre. So, I selected a unit that wasn't even built yet and I signed a lease. We opened April 1."

Berger said the recent Christmas shopping season gave her an idea of what her new north Berkeley market is like.

But she added that she still is new there and doesn't know the market as well as she does at her original store after nine years in Albany. "The new store is still experimental," she said.

She said one of the hardest things about running her own business has been overcoming both the stereotypes of and the treatment of women by men in the business world.

"Nobody takes you seriously," she said. "It's only a little better today. But when we started this store in 1974 it was worse. People think that women are in business to give their husbands a tax write-off. It's a hobby, gives the little girl something to do.

"When you try to get business advice, consultants don't take you seriously. And some of the sales reps for the publishers call you honey, dear and sweetie.

"But they don't do that to me anymore."

Berger's husband, Fred, a professor of philosophy at UC-Davis, is very supportive.

"He always makes sure that people know that I'm the one who runs the business. I make sure of that, too. It's not his, it's not ours, it's mine."

While they were planning the original store, Berger and Capitelli's first priority was to make it comfortable.

"We wanted the place to feel like a living room, so we brought in a Franklin stove and made it the focal point. That's how we got the name, Ben Franklin."

But Berger, who has a master's degree in literature, studied at Oxford and has written literary criticism, also wanted the store to have a literary name:

"Ben Franklin also was a solid literary figure in our history. And he was an essayist, autobiographer and established the country's first library. So the name made sense to us.

"But I still run into some criticism from a few feminists over the choice of the name, because Franklin was also a womanizer. Other people, however, thought the name meant we were a conservative book store. We couldn't win. But the objections seem to have diffused now."

Besides running two stores full-time, Berger also is the mother of two children — Liv, 13, and Daniel, 10. It's a life that leaves her little leisure time.

"It's ironic, for someone who loves books as much as I do," she said. "I'm disappointed because I now have so little time to read."

'Day at the Races': big community fund-raiser

LBANY — The popular "Albany Day at the Races" has, this year, turned into one of this city's biggest ources of alternative funding for community proms.

Golden Gate Fields and the Albany Chamber of mmerce have co-sponsored the event since 1968. This r's is set for Saturday, Feb. 19.

Originally it was a benefit for the chamber, but 1983 be the fifth year in a row that the day will benefit a lot other community organizations, too. How much each up gets depends entirely on what it sells: each organiza- keeps all proceeds from its own ticket sales.

For the past four years, profits have helped the Albany olis and the Friends of Albany Seniors. Chamber mann Hal Denham said participating organizations this year nclude the Lions, Soroptimist and Rotary clubs; Aly YMCA; Albany Little League baseball and even the of Albany.

"The Kiwanis Club may join us, too," Denham said. yone who wants to sell some tickets, we're glad to have m."

Groups sell tickets ($1 each or six for $5) to a drawing prizes: two Zenith 19-inch color televisions; two Zenith ch black and white TVs; two Zenith AM-FM stereo k radios; and two, three-day, two-night stays in Reno two. Prizes were donated by Supreme TV, Nevada- oe Tours and Golden Gate Fields, he said.

Each ticket also contains a stub good for $2 off on pizza at Round Table Pizza restaurants in Albany, Berkeley and at Hilltop in Richmond. With each ticket also comes a free discount ticket allowing the bearer to be admitted to the clubhouse for $2 instead of the usual fee of $5.

Golden Gate Fields is donating the cost of printing the 10,000 tickets, the posters and all other printed materials. The Chamber of Commerce is donating the mailing costs and handling the promotion, Denham said.

Denham's wife, Annabelle, for the third year in a row knit an afghan that she donated to the Rotary Club. The club will sell race day tickets at six for $5 and hold a drawing for the afghan.

Last year, the seniors and the schools sold more than $3,400 in tickets; the year before that, $3,700.

Denham said that with more community groups taking part, he expects a big increase in sales.

Pumping iron: not just for football players anymor

ALBANY — Weight lifting used to conjure up images of smelly gyms where ridiculously over-muscled men grunted and sweated with black iron barbells.

Once the province of body builders and football players, it has since become an accepted part of the American exercise regimen. Now people lift weights in clean, well-lighted places called "fitness centers" and "health clubs."

It's not just for young men anymore, either. More and more people of both sexes and all ages are discovering the benefits of "pumping iron."

An Albany Adult School class, for instance, recently had an almost equal number of women and men enrolled in a weight training course, with ages ranging from the 20s to the 70s.

"I wanted to emphasize fitness and health, rather than waistline measurements and conforming to the stereotype of the perfect body," Leslie Lupinsky says.

There are two other places in Albany where one can safely learn to lift weights: the Albany Gym and Sante Fitness Center (for women only), both located near the intersection of Solano and San Pablo avenues.

Jay Holt owns the Albany Gym on Solano, which divides its weight room between men and women. Women use it Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Arlene Taber, manager of the women's section, says programs can be tailored to the individual. Most people, she said, start with some calisthenics amd light weight training and progress to weight-resistance equipment (such as Universal and Nautilus machines) and free weights or barbells. The gym also offers locker rooms, showers and a sauna.

Learning to choose a cut of meat

Perhaps one of the most confusing or even intimidating areas of the market is the meat counter. Since the almost-disappearance of the old fashioned butcher who would cut to your order, the family cooks are often restricted in choice because of their own limitations and information.

Many people are loathe to ring the little bell, because, more often than not, the frowning man who answers it from somewhere in the back of the walk-in refrigerator has been interrupted from his meat cutting or whatever and is fairly curt in his answers. This may be because he is too busy and doesn't have enough help or maybe he really can't answer your questions.

Asking a meat cutter how to cook a piece of meat has always stuck me as a rather ludicrous activity. Their trade is to cut up meat for pre-packaging. They can identify the cut you wish to buy and point it out in the case, but more often than not, their cooking expertise is limited. Besides, he doesn't know your cooking expertise either.

A little background on your part will keep you from falling into the trap of "is it tough because I got a bad piece of meat, should I cook it longer, or did I cook it right?"

Mrs. Henry M. writes:

Do you recommend an open pan when roasting?...I like to put potatoes around it...does that call for a cover? I have a meat thermometer but I can't use it with the roaster cover...

Dear Mrs. M.,

Thank you for your nice note. The questions you asked will make for several columns, but here's a start. I'm pretty sure that a few other cooks might have the same questions, so read on.

What do you want to eat?

Perhaps that should be headed: How Much Do You Want To Spend? Or How Can I Cook It? Choosing a cut of meat is governed by any or all of these points: Understanding a little bit about where the cut of meat comes from on the animal will help for starters.

Let's talk about beef; remembering, of course, that for the most part, the cuts on lamb, pork, and veal are all in the same places, only they are smaller.

A good general rule is that the cut from a part of the animal that is not heavily exercised is more tender than a cut from a muscle that is well used. The less used a muscle is, the more fat it accummulates. You can identify this in a piece of meat as "well marbled." These little streaks, dotsor flakes of fat in the muscled fiber will melt in the cooking, adding flavor and moisture to the meat. That's what helps make it tender.

Meat that is devoid of marbelizing will dry out easily and become tough when cooked. The object here is to cook it in a way that will keep it moist and thus make it tender. So — well-marbled meat may be dry-cooked (roasted without a cover or broiled) and less tender cuts must be braised (stewing in juices, water, wine etc., or pot roasted with a cover).

Give thanks for small favors

It is a lovely fact to note that while well-marbelized (and also more expensive) cuts are juicy and tender, the tougher cuts have distinctly more flavor. So the less affluent cooks who serve pot roast instead of standing ribs have a chance at a really tastier dish. If they do it right, that is.

Do I cook it longer to make it more tender? No. You cook it right. Cooking longer may just dry it out. Cooking it right may mean using a tenderizing marinade or simmering slowly for several hours in a seasoned liquid, or pounding before cooking to break down that tough connective tissue.

The more used parts of the animal (hence the less tender cuts) would be those used in locomotion or movement. The tender parts would then be the large end of the ribs and the loin. Rumps and rounds of high quality could be roasted, of course, if they seem well-marbled. The top round can be dry roasted if it is of high quality, but generally they make wonderful pot roasts; that is, cooked with moisture and a cover. Round steaks or chuck steaks for the barbecue need marinating or tenderizing first.

As for adding potatoes or vegetables, they go in during the last half hour or so of cooking, otherwise they overcook. Potatoes cooked with a pot roast absorb a lot of the pan liquid and are very tasty. I especially like carrots and quarters of big onions here, too, country style.

If you want crisp-skin roasted potatoes, they may be

Spanish class set

ALBANY — The Park and Recreation Dept. offers a new Spanish class for children in grades kindergarden through fifth at the Cornell Elementary School Cafeteria, 920 Talbot Ave., Albany.

The program features eight weekly classes, with second and third child added at half-price.

Spanish is taught through stories, songs, games and activities. Classes will be held Tuesdays, 3:30 - 4:30 p.m. for grades K-2, and Thursdays, 3:30 -4:30 p.m. for 3-5 grades.

Fee: $24 per month, textbook and tape included. Sign up at the Albany Park and Recreation Dept., 1000 San Pablo Ave., Albany or call 644-[illegible] for further information.

LET'S TALK IT OVER with Odd E. Haugen

"People outgrow their residences just as children outgrow clothing. As the size of a family changes, the home becomes too small for Mom, Dad and several active children or two large for just Mom and Dad after the children have moved away into homes of their own. The needs of the family change but the house is the same size.

Some people are reluctant to sell their homes and find more suitable residences because the value has increased so much that they fear the tax consequences. The tax laws do provide that no tax need be paid if the proceeds from the sale are reinvested in a new residence within one year.

Let us explain how you can buy a home perfectly suited to the size and needs of your family, without paying a tax on the sale of your present home. Call or stop in so we can "Talk it over" with you.

...about our Guaranteed Sale Plan."

Pumping iron in Albany...

"We think exercise is as basic as brushing your teeth," Taber said.

The Albany Gym was operated for 20 years as a franchise figure salon. So, too, was its around-the-corner neighbor, Sante Fitness Center, formerly Lady G's Figure Salon.

Leslie Lupinsky bought Lady G's with the dream of turning it into a "quality gym for women." She opened Sante in October 1980.

"I wanted to emphasize fitness and health, rather than waistline measurements and conforming to the stereotype of the perfect body," she said. "The name Sante, which means "health" in French, seemed to capture the essence of the gym."

Lupinsky remodeled the old salon, added new equipment, and called in fitness consultants from UC-Berkeley to design programs for her. She said her goals were meeting individual needs; providing a "safe, supportive, non-competitive atmosphere;" and offering a high-quality program to help women become stronger and more fit.

The response to her approach has been "highly enthusiastic," Lupinsky said. Her original membership of 80 has grown, within two years, to almost 500.

Recently, she hired Marilyn King, a three-time Olympic pentathlete and former UC-Berkeley track and field coach, to teach weight lifting classes. King said she uses techniques of visualization and imagery to help women increase their confidence in weight lifting.

The center also offers classes in aerobic exercise and stretching, as well as a hot tub, sauna and steam bath.

POTLUCK

placed in the roasting pan uncovered, but I prefer to brown mine first in a skillet. My friend Chef Ken Wolfe instructs his students to pare equal-sized potatoes and saute them in rendered pork fat with minced onions first. Then, place them in a separate pan in the same oven with the roast to finish cooking. This way they bring to the dish a special flavor of their own. And are they good!

If you can buy a tenderloin or rib roast for dry roasting (with no cover), that's great. All you need is salt and one of the instant thermometers that chefs use to spot check on internal temperatures. These little thermometers are no bigger than a pen and are very convenient. You can get them at any cookware store. If, however, you want a recipe for a less tender cut, try this old favorite. The Germans, who are a hearty meat and potato folk, call it:

Sauerbraten

4 to 6 lbs. beef chuck or rump
Salt
Pepper
1 large onion, sliced
3 bay leaves
1 t. peppercorns
6 whole cloves
1½ c. dry red wine
½ c. red wine vinegar
2 c. water
Flour
1 T. sugar
8 gingersnaps, crushed

Sprinkle meat well with salt and pepper. Place in a large bowl or crock (not metal) and add sliced onions, bay leaves, peppercorns, cloves, wine, vinegar and water. Cover and store in refrigerator two days. Turn twice a day if you can remember.

When ready to cook, remove meat from marinade, drain well, and brown in hot fat in a Dutch oven or heavy skillet. Add about 1 c. of the marinade and all of the onions and spices in it and cook, tightly covered, for several hours or until tender. Add more marinade if necessary. Simmer but do not boil.

When done, remove the meat to a serving plate. Strain the pot liquid and throw away the onions and spices. Mix equal amounts of flour and cold water to make a smooth paste (2 T. to 2 T. to start). Add some pan liquid to dilute and then put the mixture back into the pan with the rest of the gravy and blend and stir until thickened and smooth. Add the crushed gingersnaps and a small handful of raisins if desired. Heat well and pour over the sliced meat. You don't have to be German to love this. Serve it with noodles and red cabbage and get raves.

Hold the fluoride

Recently the state announced its intention to seek a legislative sponsor for a proposal to mandate statewide artificial fluoridation of all public water supplies — the intent of this is to reduce tooth decay in small children.

This proposal, however, does not take into consideration several timely and important facts, as follows: Virtually all recently developed scientific data proves beyond doubt that irreversible physical harm is the result of long-term ingestion of this poisonous substance.

A trial in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in 1978, which brought together all the scientific proponents as well as opponents of this practice, was decided in favor of the opponents.

Another trial, this time in Illinois in 1980, again demonstrated the potential for various physiological dangers and also declared the Illnois mandatory fluridation law unconstitutional. Illinois is one of a small number of states which enacted such legislation in 1967.

In the fall of 1979 the entire water supply of Annapolis, Maryland, was poisoned due to a spill at the city water company because of an employee error. One dialysis patient died immediately and countless hundreds became ill. This was confirmed by fluoridation experts who were called into the city to conduct an investigatin. In addiion, lawsuits totaling multi-millions are now pending against the city of Annapolis.

Of lesser but nonetheless considerable importance in these times of economic stress is the enormous cost of implementation of a program of this magnitude in California. No one has yet estimated the actual cost. However, it is certain that this would be staggering. Considering the deficit prospects both state and national this alone would be a most unwise move.

Finally, it should be remembered that California for the most part has traditionally opposed fluoridatin due to concerns for the public safety as well as corrosion of water systems. I think that legislative advocacy of such a measure in the light of the recent developments would trigger a political controversary with no limitations.

Citizens with concern for the public health and fiscal responsibility should be encouraged to contact their state senator and assemblyman and urge them to reject this measure.

Respectfully,
Edward Breuer

Facing the pension crisis

(This week's column is by W.C. Meyer, Jr., who chairs the Albany Citizens Pension Advisory Committee.)

By W.C. MEYER, Jr.

ALBANY — Our pension plan was approved by the voters in 1934. The intent was to provide a fair pension to retired and disabled public safety employees. For 35 years the plan was funded, and paid benefits, based on a fixed amount at the date of retirement.

In 1969, a court decision determined the words "salary attached to rank" meant to create a fluctuating pension system. Thus retirees' pensions would change as the current salary attached to the ranks changed.

To fund this level of benefits will require a special tax of $500,000 to $700,000 each year for the next 50 years!

The Pension Advisory committee has recommended to the City Council freezing participation in the current plan, and placing future employee and city contributions into a defined contribution plan. This would provide current tax benefits to the employee, and a "nest egg" for retirement. The size of the "nest egg" would be determined by the number of years that contributions were made into the new fund, and the manner in which the assets were invested.

This proposal would hold down the future city costs, but would not address the cost of pensions for those already retired, nor the vested benefits earned up to now, for those still employed.

It would be desirable to find a mutually agreeable solution to hold down the increase in the pension benefits. So far the affected employees are sure they have a right for their pensions to double in 9 years! Taxpayers, do you consider this fair?

The city could hold down the increase in benefits by freezing the compensation of the affected ranks. The voters could approve a progressive windfall pension tax.

Citizens of Albany, become informed and involved. Current and future services require a solution now.

Employees, you too must become informed and involved — your future depends on it.

Albany pension clarifications

Times Journal reporter Judy Polumbaum did an excellent job in her 1/26/83 story covering the many issues raised by my financial analysis of the Albany pension plan. Please permit me to clarify and correct a few points.

First, I made no assumptions. I relied totally on official documents — the July 1982 actuarial study for the Albany plan and two analyses of analogous defined benefit systems: one done by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and one done for the Social Security Administration. Every number in my analysis can be checked. Most of them can easily be checked using an inexpensive $5 to $10 calculator. Albany residents may inspect a copy of the report at the city clerk's office or obtain a copy for personal review.

My conclusion is that we are in far more serious trouble than we have ever imagined. The plan now has a total obligation of $83 million through 2031 and only $2.2 million to generate income. Although fund earnings are high under professional management, they are not enough to make the 1983 pension payment. The payments will rise each year for the next 34 years before reaching a maximum in 2017. However, using only the plan's reserves, the fund will go bankrupt before the period 1989-90.

It is clear that the policies of the last 14 years have failed. An approximate $200,000 unfunded liability in 1969 has grown to more than $10 million today. During this same 14-year period, Albany taxpayers have contributed an extra $1.3 million in taxes beyond charter requirements and matching employee/city contributions to the plan have also substantially increased.

My analysis shows that paying $29 million more into the plan over the next 24 years will not bring it into balance. Perhaps, between 25 to 32 years from now at a total cost of $50.5 million, the plan might become funded with no new taxes required.

The magnitude of our problem can be demonstrated. Suppose we freeze the police, fire, and pension budgets at the 1982 level ($2.6 million). If we could then divert 100 percent of all remaining city revenues ($1.6 million) into the plan, it would take more than 10 years to fund the unfunded liability. During this period there would be no other city employees — no streetlights, stoplights, or anything. The city would in effect be closed for 10 years.

I agree with the city attorney that the Newhouser decision per se will not be appealed. However, the economic condition of the city and the pension plan arising from the Newhouser decision will lead to new court cases which will result in a de facto modification of that ruling.

I am not an attorney, but my analysis is that the Newhouser decision unknowingly imposed a "Pyramid-like" debt obligation upon the city. Pyramid obligations are illegal because they are economically impossible to pay.

A number of elected city officials have fiduciary responsibilities. These fiduciary responsibilities are in direct conflict with the economic effects of the Newhouser decision which threaten the very financial existence of the pension plan and the city itself.

This is why I think it can not be a political issue once the facts are known. No one can violate a court order (The Newhouser decision) or a fiduciary responsibility. If the two obligations are in conflict, only a court can resolve such a conflict. A court is not a political arena.

Ultimately, I think the city will survive, current city employees will maintain their jobs, and pensioners will get a modified, but economically viable pension after the issues have been resolved by the court(s).

The policies of the last 14 years have failed and have served no one. If nothing else, my report might lead to a critical reexamination of the pension plan so that we can focus our limited resources on solutions that will work.

Educators' gift

As Valentine's Day draws near, so does National Condom Week, Feb. 14-21. Condom popularity is now rising, and needs to rise even further, considering that the number of out-of-wedlock births rose 11.4 percent in 1980.

Condoms are 90 percent safe and give a man a feeling of security and a sense of control. The herpes epidemic could be curtailed with side use of condoms becuase women don't always know when they have herpes, and virus can't pass through the rubber.

Sexual Health Educators offers your good readers a free report covering correct usage, types, brands, and advantages of each. They will also receive two free sample condoms, safely sealed.

Send a long, self addressed, stamped envelope to Sexual Health Educators, Box 1112-TJ, El Cerrito, Ca. 94530.

Finally, West Contra Costa County will get 911

By DON McCORMACK

After years of planning, West Contra Costa County will hook up this fall to a 911 system that is expected to cut three to five minutes off the time it takes to get help in an emergency — minutes that should save lives.

Testing of the system, which is in use now in Kensington and the San Ramon Valley, will begin in June.

When people call for help now, they may spend precious seconds scanning the West County phone directory for the right number. The area has about 10 fire departments and eight police agencies, each with its own phone number.

Further confusing matters, many people are unsure what agency provides them police and fire service. The West County is a jumble of cities and unincorporated neighborhoods, confusing particularly along jurisdictional borders. One home can be served by one agency, and an adjoining home by another.

Some neighborhoods, Tara Hills, for example, are served by different agencies. The county, through the sheriff's office, provides police protection; Pinole, fire protection.

911 provides a universal number for emergencies, 9-1-1. When someone calls for help, a computer quickly traces the number, classifies it by address and shunts the call to the correct agency, said Willard Wehe, 911 project manager for Contra Costa County.

"A study done by the Stanford Research Institute showed that 911 cut three to five minutes off police calls," Wehe said. In an emergency, these minutes could be crucial, he added.

He said the system is scheduled to go in operation in October. Local police and fire dispatch centers are now adding the necessary equipment.

The system, pioneered in Europe, owes its existence to legislation signed by President Lyndon Johnson. Alameda and San Francisco already have the 911 systems, and other Bay Area counties, such as San Mateo and Santa Clara, are expected to hook up shortly after, Wehe said. Ultimately, every county California will have a 911 system.

Wehe, who has been working on 911 for five years, said implementation took a long time locally because so many jurisdictions had to agree on a system.

On the other hand, the San Francisco system whipped through because the city is run by one government, he continued.

No special equipment is needed on residential phones for 911. Payphones in the county have already been redesigned to handle 911. Callers will be able to summon help without putting in a coin.

Funding for the system has been quietly underway for years. Callers pay a half percent on the calls they make within the state, Wehe said.

No ad campaign is planned, Wehe said, because officials are concerned about getting a rash of calls from people testing the system. But the number will be listed in the phone directories.

"It will save a lot of lives," said Wehe. "There has been no problem (in other places) with the system. It works extremely well."

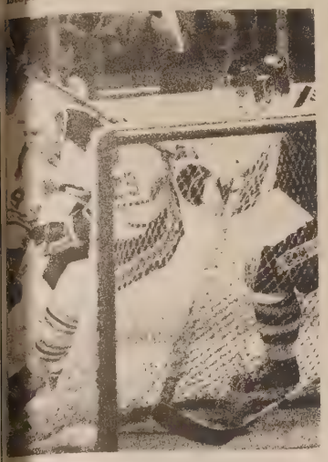
Frozen fun: hockey nights at Hilltop Iceland

By STEVE TADY

They will never receive an Olympic medal for pounding each other against the boards, but they don't want one.

For the players who gather at Hilltop Mall's Iceland late on Wednesday nights, the name of the game is hockey, and the fun nonstop.



The scene begins to unfold about 9 p.m. They straggle with bundles of equipment, slightly tired expressions, of course, hockey sticks.

They retire to the dressing rooms, waiting for the last the open-hour skaters to clear the ice. For some of the ers, the hour-long skirmish is a chance to practice. er younger players are hoping to advance their skills to leve it will take to make the National Hockey League. d some are just over-the-hill, trying to remember the days gone by. But they all have a great time.

e first player you might meet is Leo Kahane. Ka- s always around because he works at Iceland Kahane played hockey in the Berkeley youth leagues seven years. He went to Oakland Seals games, as did st of the players in the Berkeley leagues. Kahane is try- to ace up to the demise of hockey in the Bay Area. ockey is really dying in the area. When the Seals left, it something to do with it, but there are just too many er sports taking away from hockey now," he said.

He makes a quick check of the arena, to see that open-hour skating is going smoothly. "I quit organized hockey mainly because of my size. When I was smaller, it was OK because everyone else was small, but now, some of these guys are really big," said Kahane. Just then, a loud thump peppered the nearby boards. A skater lost balance and cracked face-first into the side, loosening several teeth. Kahane went back to work.

The crowd of hockey players swelled. Esko Siipola is one of the larger players. He is a Richmond resident of Finnish descent, 28, and quite good at hockey. He is part of the Fresno Connection. The Fresno Falcons are a semi-pro team and some of the players who play at Iceland also play for the Falcons. They use the Wednesday playing time to sharpen up for weekend games. The team pays for traveling expenses and equipment, so the road trips aren't so unbearable. In fact, only a few Falcon players live in the Fresno area.

"There's something about hockey. It's hard to describe. It's my first love. Kind of like baseball is to kids here, hockey is to kids in Canada, where I grew up," said Siipola as he prepared to take the ice.

Kahane is back and ready to play after advising the young man with the customized bridgework to seek help. "We can just patch 'em up. I can't stitch anybody up. A couple of times people have knocked themselves out," said Kahane.

Most everyone has taken the ice, skating in a counter clockwise direction. The pucks are thrown out on the ice and shots start flying from everywhere toward each goal.

Mike Holmes, an Albany resident, skates over and takes a seat. He is another of the big players and plays for the Falcons. Holmes grew up in Richmond and went to El Cerrito High. He played two years of junior hockey in British Columbia, which enabled him to get a scholarship to Northeastern University. He still wears the NU jersey proudly. He set several scoring records for defensemen which still stand.

"I was in the Boston Bruin organization for awhile. I was playing in Grand Rapids, Michigan and as I got older, I could read the writing on the wall. I was competing with guys a lot younger. So when I realized I was washed up, I came back here to get a job. The guys started bugging me to play with Fresno, and I was getting out of shape, so I decided to come out here. This is great, it's like bowling or racquetball for other people. We just go out and have fun," he said.

On this Wednesday, there are no goalies, so the name of the game is keepaway. When someone maneuvers near the goal, they are supposed to try and hit the post in order to score. A shot into the goal does not count. The hitting is good-natured. After battling for the puck in the corner, smiles are exchanged. Not so in Fresno this weekend.

Greg Taylor was born and raised in Berkeley, another veteran of youth hockey wars. He will battle for the Falcons this weekend. "Winter wouldn't be the same without hockey. The best part of these games is the friendship you develop with the guys. Sure, I had dreams of playing pro hockey. I tried out for junior teams in Canada, but I pretty much gave it up," Taylor said.

Some of the players are just beginning to dream. Such is the case with LaRue Mayo, 14, a freshman at Salesian High. He wants to play in the NHL, and he is prepared to go to Canada if he has to. "I would like to go pro. I might go to boarding school in Canada to get better. I'm trying out for the Bantam AAA team in Berkeley right now, I made the first cut," he said.

And for Laurie Lockwood, who can skate with all of them, fun is the driving force. "This is my favorite game. I grew up outside Philadelphia and loved the Flyers. When we moved out here from Colorado, I wanted to keep playing because I played on a midget team. A lot of these guys are good friends," she said.

If you wander into the Iceland Arena late one Wednesday night, you won't be overtaken by the quality of the hockey. But you won't see a group of people having any more fun.

Volunteers aid Issei

In order to offset reductions in federal support for the social services, East Bay Japanese for Action (EBJA) recently hired Marlene Tonai to head volunteer recruitment and training for its senior programs.

EBJA was incorportated in 1971 to provide bilingual assistance with health and social service related matters to elderly Japanese Americans, the majority of whom are first generation Issei now in their late 70's and 80's.

While volunteers are being sought from all segments of the community, special efforts are being made to reach the second generation Nisei, many of whom are approaching retirement.

To volunteer call Tonai at 848-3560.

Honor set for volunteer

The Liberty Bell Award will be presented by the Alameda County Bar Association as part of its law day luncheon program in May.

The award is designed to give public recognition to a layperson for outstanding community service. Requests for nominations have been forwarded to numerous organizations and persons in Alameda County.

Nominations accompanied by a statement on the background of the recipient should be forwarded no later than March 21, to Michael A. Olden, Attorney at Law, 528 Grand Avenue, Oakland, California, 94610.

Career talk for women

Sue Rugge, president of Information on Demand, will speak about careers in information brokering on Thursday, Feb. 17, from noon to 1 p.m. at Turning Point Career Center, 2600 Bancroft Way, Berkeley.

She will discuss the transformation in the economy from the industrial age to the information age, and her personal transition from running a corporate library to starting her own Berkeley-based information business.

Verna Le Sard

EL CERRITO — Graveside services for Verna Blanche Le Sard, longtime area resident, were held at Rolling Hills Memorial Park, with Rebekah Sephyr Lodge No. 263 of Richmond officiating.

A native of Fairchild, Ind., who had lived in El Cerrito since 1959, Mrs. Le Sard died in a San Pablo convalescent hospital. She was a member of Rebekah Sephyr Lodge No. 263 and was a saleswoman for 40 years in various department stores.

She is survived by two sons, John Clark of El Cerrito and James Clark of Apple Valley, Calif.; a daughter, Vera Larson of Minnetonka, Min.; eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Wilson and Kratzer Mortuaries handled funeral arrangements.

James C. Beare

ALBANY - Services were held last week at Ellis-Olson Mortuary for James C. Beare, who died in Yountville Jan. 30. He was 91.

Mr. Beare, a native of Missouri and a long-time resident of this area, was a retired farmer.

Survivors include six daughters, Ella Quick and Lucy Beare, both of Albany, Edna Bennett of Alaska, Maryellen Smith of Pleasant Hill and Wanda L. Regnier of Richmond; one son, Carl Beare of Pleasant Hill; 14 grandchildren; and 11 great-grandchildren.

Dr. Fred Stripp officiated at the service. Burial was at Rolling Hills Memorial Park.

William C. Bubb

EL CERRITO - Services were held last week at Sunset View Memorial Chapel for William Clarence Bubb, who died Jan. 30 in San Pablo. He was 65.

Mr. Bubb was a native of Los Angeles and a resident of El Cerrito for 22 years. He was machinist for Cutter Laboratories for 30 years and a veteran of the U. S. Coast Guard and the U. S. Navy during World War II.

Survivors include his wife Lois Marie Bubb; a daughter, Carolyn Marie Sims of San Jose; a son, Franklin Christopher Bubb of Paradise; and five grandchildren.

The Rev. David Brooks officiated. Inurnment was at Sunset View Cemetery.

Maureen Van Meter

Funeral services were held last week for long-time local resident Maureen T Van Meter

A native of Totland Bay, Isle of Wight, England Mrs. Van Meter died Jan 30 in an Oakland Hospital.

She was employed as a sales clerk for Capwell's Dept. Store for many years, and was a member of St. John the Baptist Catholic Church.

Survivors include a daughter, Julie Van Meter of El Cerrito: two sisters, Dolores Brown and Sheilagh Jenkins, and two brothers, Patrick and Kevin Newman, all of England.

Burial was at St. Joseph's Cemetery. Arrangements were handled by Ellis-Olson Mortuary.

The family prefers memorial donations to the American Cancer Society, 10290 San Pablo Ave., Suite 102, El Cerrito, or to St. Anthony's Dining Room, 128 Golden Gate Ave., S.F

Cat license plan fails first test

The Contra Costs County Animal Services Advisory Committee has rejected a measure requiring cat owners to license their pets and has decided to further study possible licensing fees.

Committee chair Ron Michener said the cat licensing measure failed Feb.2 on a tie vote, 3-to-3, with one committee member absent. Michener said he favors making cat owners pay county licensing fees. The committee will eventually send its recommendations to the Board of Supervisors.

Last year the county Animal Services Department killed about 10,000 cats that were taken to animal shelters, at a cost to the county of about $500,000, Michener said.

Another 7,000 or so cats were killed along roads and streets by vehicles, he said.

Michener said he is not just trying to raise more money, as critics of the licensing plan charge, although he is concerned about the cost to the county of euthanasia for unwanted cats.

Michener said the licensing plan "is not a case of dog vs. cat, but a matter of fairness." About 160 cat owners voluntarily licensed their cats last year, compared to 50,000 dogs that were licensed in 1982 as required by the county, he said.

He deplores the "laissez-faire attitude that I see in people who have cats."

Kids learn protection

ALBANY — The Albany Park Department and the Sennin Organization are now accepting a limited number of students for their sennin budo program for children.

Classes feature sennin budo, a traditional jujutsu system, based on non-violent self-protection and non-conflict. These classes, which are not competitive, also include basic elements of the sennin-do method of personal growth.

Children 5-14 may enroll. Cost is $15 per month. Call 236-4340 or 526-7518.

$500 Reward.

If you're in the 25% federal tax bracket and you deposit $2,000 in an Allstate Savings Individual Retirement Account (IRA) you'll pay $500 less in federal income taxes this April 15th.

If you're in the 35% tax bracket you'll pay $700 less.

And if you're in the 50% bracket you'll pay $1,000 less.

Not only that, the $2,000 deduction from your gross income may well put you in a slightly lower tax bracket overall, so you'll be rewarded there, too.

And you won't pay any federal tax on the deposit or the interest it earns 'til you're retired, and probably in a lower bracket.

You can choose between a Variable Rate or Fixed Rate IRA.

The Variable pays an interest rate that changes periodically, based on the four-week average yield of six-month T-Bills.

The Fixed pays an interest rate that's fixed for the full term you select: 18, 24, 36 or 48 months.

The maximum yearly deposit is $2,000 for an individual, $2,250 for a couple with one working spouse, or $4,000 for a couple with both working.

For more information, stop by any Allstate Savings office or call our Bank by Mail Department collect at (213) 240-5913.

IRA. A retirement plan you benefit from without waiting 'til your hair turns gray.

Astro-graph

If your birthday is Wednesday, Feb. 9:
Your greatest successes this coming year will come from projects or ventures which are unselfishly motivated. You'll end up receiving more than you'll give.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
You'll have what it takes today to take things which others feel are too minimal to bother with and turn them around into something of personal advantage.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Newer interests are favored at this time, so this is a good day to work on projects which have recently captured your fancy. Proceed in fresh directions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Personal ambitions will be achieved easier today if you seek to help others as well. Gaining others' support will do the trick.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
You have the ability to express your ideas today so as to arouse enthusiasm, especially if you're promoting a new interest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Determination and persistence are the two plusses you will bring into play today to gain your aims if there's a goal you want to realize.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Your mate can be swayed to your way of thinking today if you present your views with verve and logic. Don't use emotional ploys.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
You may spend more time today sorting out situations for others than you will in attending to your own interests. However, you'll enjoy being helpful.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
You radiate a warmth and charm today which others will find extremely attractive, especially those of the opposite gender. Get glowing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Time spent today on your pet hobby, or puttering around the house doing tasks you enjoy, will prove very relaxing. Have fun being productive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
If you have a free evening, this would be a good time to take care of social obligations. Even glum companions will yield to your bright spirit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
You won't regret buying things for others today, especially if they are members of the family. Your joy comes from bringing happiness to those you love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Even when dealing with serious matters today, try to employ a bit of humor and wit to make your points. Light touches will lessen the sting.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

Everyone is familiar with the lead of a fifth best to give the impression that you hold only a four-card suit. This lead is usually made when you feel you can afford to fool partner.

In "The Tricky Game" Hugh Kelsey points out that you can also find opportunities to lead third best from a four-card suit to give the impression that you hold a five-card suit.

West might have selected a club lead, but decided to stick to his bid suit. Then he carefully selected the fifth spot.

Dummy's 10 held the trick and the spade finesse was taken. West was in with the king and continued the deception by leading the three of diamonds.

South won and took the three spades. West discarded his 10 of hearts on the last one. Now South was under the impression that if he led a heart, West would be able to set him with the ace of hearts and three diamonds. So he decided to try to scrape four club tricks for his contract. Now West set him with the jack of clubs, the diamonds and that ace of hearts.

Note that West had led the three of diamonds when he got in with the spade king. Had he played ace-next, South would have seen East's third diamond and he would have been led astray.

When the law is very weird

By JON BASHOR

You can't dance all night in Pinole.

It's illegal.

And if your kids have whistles on their bikes in San Pablo — or if they play football in the street in Richmond — they're little criminals.

And, no matter what your demeanor, it's a misdemeanor to let anyone sleep in your "shower, kitchen, cellar, hallway, water closet, bath or slop-sink room" in Richmond.

In El Cerrito, owners of dogs may not let man's best friend chase cars or bicycles, spill garbage cans, give birth to puppies on the streets, "lie on sidewalks as to block them," bury objects of any sort, or even retrieve newspapers from other people's porches.

Throughout West County, cities have laws on the books that are little-known, out-of-date or just plain strange.

But seemingly senseless rules aren't always bad, explains Pinole City Manager Don Bradley.

"There are things in the law," he says, "which are designed to give the city a handle on problems before they emerge in the heat of battle. They are written to control such occurrences which might occur."

Following this logic, it's not surprising to find that in Pinole, if you want to keep a rhinoceros, elephant or hippopotamus, you must first register with the chief of police.

The same goes for people who want to keep leopards, monkeys, bears, wolves "or a dangerous or poisonous reptile," according to Title 6, Chapter 4, section 70 of the Pinole municipal code.

When it comes to animals, El Cerrito doesn't monkey around either. In fact, no one can have a monkey around without a permit from a health officer. The same requirement also applies to other wild animals, venomous or poisonous reptiles, horses, mules, burros, goats, bees and any flock of fowl with more than 13 members.

Still other beasts (males of the species) are banned outright: roosters, bulls, billy goats and hogs may never set claw or hoof in town.

Finally, the city code's Title VII makes it illegal to "display, sell, offer for sale, barter or give away as novelties any baby chicks, rabbits, ducklings or other fowl, whether or not dyed, colored or otherwise artificially treated." (Dealers are allowed, however, to sell the same animals for "food purposes.")

Games — any kind of entertainment, in fact — are also popular topics for lawmakers past and present.

If anyone in Richmond is thinking about opening a trampoline center, for example, they should think twice.

There are 10 pages of regulations in city lawbooks for would-be trampoline entrepreneurs — including detailed building specifications and insurance requirements. Police officers always have access to such places. And it is illegal to let anyone younger than age 6 or under the influence of drugs to bounce around on a trampoline.

If you tell the city to go fly a kite, it will respond with Title XI, Sec. 44, Chap. 010, which states, "It shall be unlawful ... to fly any kite the frame or any part of which is constructed of wire."

Even if the kite is approved, don't run down the street to get it airborne: "It shall be unlawful for children or others to play games of any kind in or upon any street within the City of Richmond."

Although marathon dances may have been popular in the Depression, Pinole has taken steps to prevent a nostalgic comeback.

"It is unlawful for any person to conduct, operate or carry on within the city of Pinole any marathon dance, marathon walk or public dance," reads Title 5, Chapter 44, Section 80, "where persons are employed to dance with patrons."

In San Pablo, games can get you or your children in trouble. It is illegal to attach a siren or whistle to a bike, and if handlegrips are used on the handlebars, "such grips (must be) securely glued or cemented to the handlebars."

For adults, "it is unlawful for any person, parent or guardian having the right of control over any children to leave any such child under 5 years of age unattended in Davis Park in the city."

Also in San Pablo, it's against the law to own pinball machines. But Title 9, Chapter 4, Section 40 doesn't address the galactic issue of video games.

Does all this make you mad enough to spit? Don't — at least not in Richmond.

In its health code, the city decrees that no one may expectorate or urinate "upon the floor, steps or any part of any building or conveyance or upon any street or sidewalk within the City of Richmond."

If you're working yourself into a mood to lose sleep over civic regulation, stay off the street. Under San Pablo's Title 10, Chapter 12, Section 04: "No person shall stop, stand or park a vehicle on any street for a period of time longer than 30 minutes between the hours of two a.m. and four a.m. of any day."

Will things ever change? Don't look for the answer in El Cerrito. Title X, Chap. 40, Sec. 010 prohibits soothsaying, astrologers and fortune-tellers.

Remarriage talk slated

As part of family communication week, the Jewish Family Service of Alameda and Contra Costa Counties will present a lecture/discussion concerning the difficulties encountered when a parent remarries.

The discussion will be held Tuesday, March 8, 7:30 - 9 p.m., and will be led by Pearl Leonard, L.C.S.W., a family counselor.

The session will be held at the Jewish Community Center Auditorium, 3245 Sheffield Ave., in Oakland. There is no fee. For further information, call Barbara Steinberg, 532-6314.

Cartooning set for kids

ALBANY — The Park and Recreation Dept. will offer a cartooning class to children aged 9 - 15 at the Albany Community Center, 1123 - 8th St.

The instructor said the course allows students to "investigate their imaginations in a series of exercises and original games structure for their age."

Class is on Wednesdays, 3:30 to 5 p.m. subject to signups. Fee is $16.50, plus a $6 material fee. Mark Berstein, the instructor, has been a cartoonist for 10 years. Call 644-8514 for further information.

LEGAL NOTICE J-110827
NOTICE OF DEATH OF KARL W. WERNER AND OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE
CASE NUMBER: 60322
SUPERIOR COURT
OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF CONTRA COSTA
725 Court Street
P.O. Box 911
Martinez, CA 94553
ESTATE OF
KARL W. WERNER
DECEDENT
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate of KARL W. WERNER, a petition has been filed by INGRID WERNER in the Superior Court of Contra Costa County requesting that INGRID WERNER be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act.
A hearing on the petition will be held on February 23, 1983, at 9:00 a.m. in Dept. 14 located at 725 Court Street, Martinez, CA 94553.
If you object to the granting of the petition, you should either appear at the hearing and state your objections of file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claims with the court or present it to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 700 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire prior to four months from the date of the hearing noticed above.
You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estates, you may file a request with the court to receive special notice of the filing of the inventory of estate assests and of the petitions, accounts and reports described in section 1200.5 of the California Probate Code.
